Trippa and Lampredotto are good examples of the "cucina povera" tradition in Tuscan cuisine. When times are hard there isn't a Bistecca alla Fiorentina on the table every day, so peasants learned to utilize every part of their livestock. Trippa (or Tripe) is the edible lining of a cow's stomach, and Lampredotto is a cow's fourth stomach.

The Tuscan Table gave me and my family an amazing experience. The service was professional and consistent. The food was outstanding, the specials gave us many options, the manager Lilly made sure we were satisfied and checked in on our table. I would recommend this restaurant to anyone. Best Italian restaurant in the area with a great atmosphere.
