Coyote was going along, and he came to a river where five pretty sisters were bathing and washing clothes some distance from each other. "What pretty girls," said Coyote to himself, "I wonder how I can enjoy them all." He thought a little, and then turned himself into a baby laced up in a papoose-board, and set himself adrift on the river.

An encounter with a coyote in the urban and suburban landscape is a rare event, even where coyotes are found in large numbers. These animals are generally nocturnal and seldom seen. You may catch a glimpse of a coyote, however, as they move from one part of their territory to another in search of prey (usually small mammals such as mice or voles).
