Morris the Moose. By B. Wiseman. ABOUT THE BOOK: Morris is convinced that the cow and the deer he meets are actually moose like him. On the other hand, the cow tries to convince Morris that he is a cow while the deer tries to convince Morris that he is a deer, not a moose. When the three uninformed animals stop for a drink of water from a stream, they see their own reflections and they understand that the three of them are all different—even though they all have four legs, a tail, and ...

B. Wiseman’s charming story, Morris the Moose, raises questions about knowledge and its relationship to evidence. Morris thinks he knows that the cow he meets is a moose because the cow appears to satisfy the criteria Morris has for being a moose, such as having four legs, a tail, and horns. The cow tries to convince Morris that he is not a moose by telling him that he gives milk, moos, and has a mother who is not a moose.
