Running on the roof of the world is an important story about oppression and not letting the evil done to you change you. If you're aware of the situation in Tibet - which has been going on since the 50s - then you'll understand the setting for this story. If you don't know about it you really should go and find out!

Running on the Roof of the World by Jess Butterworth

Running on the Roof of the World follows 12-year-old Tash as she gets thrust into world and political events much larger than herself and rather unexpectedly finds herself attempting the cross-Himalayan trek out of China and into India. However, as I read the book, something kept nagging at me.

I know a tale (a true one!) of someone who tried to walk on the roof of one of these, at a lot lower speed (probably 0-10mph). He had clambered up the rear of the then stationary unit to try Train Surfing. The movement as it started to go forwards again caused him to fall off and break at least two limbs when he hit the floor.
