The Tao, or The Way The Tao is central to all Chinese philosophy and religion. It is often translated as the "way" or "path" - or the way of all things. The symbol that most accompanies it is the yin/yang symbol because the polarities of yin and yang form its essence and dynamism.

The Tao, or The Way - world religions professor

Tao is a way of seeing the human journey from the eyes of nature and it is always 'just so.' All that we are is perfect - warts and all. To understand and activate our essence, we cannot negate any part of it. We learn to work with what works - and release what blocks us. Experience is Tao's tapestry for success.

BBC - Religions - Taoism: What is the Tao?

Tao or Dao is a Chinese word signifying the "way", "path", "route", "road" or sometimes more loosely "doctrine", "principle" or "holistic beliefs". In the context of East Asian philosophy and East Asian religions, Tao is the natural order of the universe whose character one's human intuition must discern in order to realize the potential for individual wisdom. This intuitive knowing of "life" cannot be grasped as a concept; it is known through actual living experience of one's everyday being. La

Tao - Wikipedia

"The Way" The central concept in Taoism is that of Tao , the way. The Taoist saw nature as an ever-dynamic, intrinsically undifferentiated void, a "vast and timeless ocean of spotless purity upon which, through the interplay of dark and light, a myriad illusions play like ever-changing cloud formations or restless waves . . .
