Lying About Hitler was written following the famous (in history circles anyway) libel trial involving David Irving in 2000. Even typing that sentence I'm tempted to describe the trial as 'of David Irving', and it is important to remember that although in practice the defence exposed Irving's flaws as an historian, in fact the case was brought to court by David Irving himself.

A big lie is a propaganda technique. The expression was coined by Adolf Hitler, when he dictated his 1925 book Mein Kampf, about the use of a lie so "colossal" that no one would believe that someone "could have the impudence to distort the truth so infamously". Hitler believed the technique was used by Jews to blame Germany's loss in World War I on German general Erich Ludendorff, who was a prominent nationalist and antisemitic political leader in the Weimar Republic.

Hitler's Lies. Through lies and promises that he couldn't uphold Hitler won the votes of many peasants and lower middle classes. When Hitler started to come to power, Germany was in desperate need of a powerful leader that would bring Germany out of their depression. Hitler offered that exact thing through Germany, knowing that when something is in the depths of their despair they are vulnerable.

Hitler On The Big Lie. All this was inspired by the principle - which is quite true in itself - that in the big lie there is always a certain force of credibility; because the broad masses of a nation are always more easily corrupted in the deeper strata of their emotional nature than consciously or voluntarily; and thus in the primitive simplicity of their minds they more readily fall victims to the big lie than the small lie, since they themselves often tell small lies in little matters ...

Hitler's Table Talk reveals he continued to wish for a unified Protestant Reich Church of Germany for some time after 1937, which had largely proven unsuccessful. This was in line with his earlier policy of uniting all the Protestant churches so they would purvey the new racial and nationalist doctrines of the regime and act as a unifying rather than divisive force in Germany.
