The Africa Cookbook:Tastes of a Continent. By Jessica B. Harris. From Capetown to Cairo Mombasa to Monrovia, the African continent is laden with tastes and aromas that are at the same time familiar and yet exotic. Fresh fish still glistening with sea water await grilling over hot coals and baskets of fragrant mangoes perfume the air with the musky scent of the tropics until time for dessert.

It may be a bit too much to expect one book to describe the gastronomy of an entire continent. (Could we imagine a book called "The Europe Cookbook: Tastes of a Continent"?) and therein is the problem. This book's title says "continent" and it contains recipes from Western Africa, Eastern Africa, Southern Africa and some from Northern Africa.
